Fascinating future-oriented building technology

The apartment industry has grown alongside Korea's economic development since the 1960s. In its present form, it is recognized as the most common method of housing for the middle class. The apartment, which spearheaded the development of real estate industry in Korea, has once embodied the negative aspects of Korean architecture. However, the apartment has now firmly established itself as a symbol of residential culture that represents the life of the Korean people. As a result of various urban planning efforts and architectural experiments, the apartment continues to grow stronger, leading the development of Korean architectural culture.
