[AF02f] Urban Regeneration and Coast Reclamation

▶ Incheon Chinatown’s living legacy dates back to 1883, when the port of Incheon was open to China. This ethnic neighborhood with exotic yet traditional atmosphere offers a glimpse of life of bicultural Incheon in the early 20th century.

▶ Songdo International Business District (IBD), adjacent to the Incheon International Airport and masterplanned along Incheon’s waterfront, is a future-oriented and green city. Songdo IBD is the first sustainable city being built on reclaimed land and first LEED-certified city in Korea.

Introduction of Tour

[Wolmido island culture street]

The Culture Street starts with Doolde Pillar and continues onward to Wolmido Square, Arts Square, Pebble Stone Square, Good Morning Square and several other notable highlights. Throughout these areas spontaneous performances are performed and street artists can be seen on the spot. Moreover, many cafes and seafood restaurants are lined along the coast so you can enjoy coffee or fresh seafood while viewing the sea.

Introduction of Tour

[Sinpo International Market]

An increasing number of tourists and international merchants have visited Incheon by ferries and cruise ships, turning the local market into an international shopping area over the past few decades. The information desk and offices at the market area provide a variety of service translation services, trade and shopping information etc. for tourists and merchants from home and abroad.

[Jagu Park]

Nestled in Mt. Eungbongsan in Incheon Metropolitan City, Jagu Park was first called Nanguj Park and then 93 Park before becoming Jagu Park during the colonial rule of Japan. During the colonial rule of Japan, there was another park called Dong Park (Dang Park), which was created and used as a shrine by the Japanese
